

Fabio Favata

Fabio Favata, Italian nationality, born in 1962, is an astrophysicist who obtained PhD in physics at Palermo University (Italy). He is active in the fields of X-ray astrophysics, studying in particular the processes leading to the formation of stars and the role of high-energy radiation. He has been working for ESA since 1989, starting as a Staff Scientist at ESTEC (The Netherlands), before moving to Paris ESA HQ where he currently is the Head of the Community Coordination Office. In his present function he is responsible for the interface between the ESA Science Programme and the scientific community on one hand and the Member States delegations on the other.